FOREWORD

The Visayas State University (VSU) Graduate Program Manual of Operation (GPMO) is a document which provides vital information about working procedures of the Graduate School. It is a kind of guidebook of how things are done in the management and operation of the office and informs administrators, graduate faculty members, graduate students and other concerned individuals about the policies, guidelines and procedures.

The manual is important because of many reasons such as; a) it will provide information and guidance to graduate faculty as they advise graduate students and interact with the Graduate School; b) it represents current Graduate School policies, guidelines and procedures; c) it will improve the efficiency in the implementation of the graduate programs with the listing of all policies, guidelines and procedures that are required to be followed by the Administrators, Graduate Faculty, Academic Deans and Heads of Departments with Graduate Programs and Graduate Students; and d) it can better educate the Graduate Faculty, Graduate School Officers and Administrative Staff regarding the work that they are supposed to deliver.

This first edition of the GPMO is based on the Board of Regents approved Graduate School Code and it is with ardent hope that this will serve as basis for proper and effective implementation of the university's advanced education programs as required by the Commission on Higher Education per CMO 15, Series of 2019 (Policies, Standards and Guidelines for Graduate Programs)

I. Introduction

Graduate Education in the Visayas State University (formerly named then as Visayas State College of Agriculture) started in April 1979 in the Department of Agricultural Development Education now Department of Agricultural Education and Extension when it offered a master's degree in agricultural education and agricultural extension. Graduate work then was under the supervision of the head of said department. In 1980, the Office of the Graduate Studies was created to coordinate the total program of the college. The first master's degree was awarded during the Graduation Ceremony in April 1983 in the field of agricultural extension.

Realizing the need to standardize graduate rules and regulations, the Board of Trustees approved the institution's Graduate School Code in 1984 that embodied the guidelines relative to the administration of all graduate programs of the institution's system. With the help of the New Zealand Government and Massey University, the Graduate School launched in November 1985 the Extramural Program for Rural Development (EPRD) to enable students to take graduate courses for credit through distance learning with the use of study guides and other learning modules.

Cognizant to the needs however of establishing globally competitive university of science and technology and environmental conservation which can ably help solve the problems in agricultural and rural development in developing countries, like the Philippines and in accordance to the institution's mandate, the Visayas State University (VSU) heeds the call for the development of competent, quality and world-class manpower. To address this concern, the university offers relevant and quality graduate educational programs designed to influence both young and mature minds towards positive transformation especially those associated with the current shifts in the national research, development and extension thrusts in agriculture, environmental management, industry and other related fields.

V. DELIVERY MODE OF LEARNING

The university adopts the four modes of study delivery namely; a) Face to face, b) On line (synchronous/asynchronous); c) Modular, and d) Combination of on line and modular)

Face to face learning is an instructional method where course content and learning material are taught in person to a group of students. This allows for a live interaction between a learner and an instructor. It is the most traditional type of learning instruction. Learners benefit from a greater level of interaction with their fellow students as well. In face-to-face learning, students are held accountable for their progress at the class's specific meeting date and time. It ensures a better understanding and recollection of lesson content and gives class members a chance to bond with one another.

Synchronous learning is learning that happens at the same time for the instructor and the learners; meaning that there's real-time interaction between them. Asynchronous learning is learning that doesn't necessarily happen at the same time for the instructor and the learners

Modular learning is a form of distance learning that uses Self-Learning Module based on the most essential learning competencies. The modules include sections on motivation and assessment that serve as a complete guide of both teachers' and students' desired competencies

VI. IMPLEMENTING POLICIES AND GUIDELINES

Review and Evaluation of Graduate Curricular Programs

The proposal must be submitted to and approved in the following order: Graduate School Curriculum Committee, Graduate Faculty, University Curriculum Committee, University Academic Council and the VSU Board of Regents.
2. In case of interdisciplinary programs which involve two or more departments, the Dean of Graduate School shall designate the lead department which shall take charge of the administration of the program.
3. The Graduate School may establish cooperative linkages and consortia with outside agencies or institutions in order to strengthen its graduate programs, provided that such cooperative arrangements or linkages are approved by the Graduate Faculty, the University Academic Council and the VSU Board of Regents. A Memorandum of Agreement must be entered into by the cooperating institutions.
